To whom it may concern:

I am a recent retiree and have decided to grow organic veggies in my back yard in order to feed myself with health promoting food. I can no longer trust the fresh food from the supermarket since most of it is grown too far away from where I live (Hawaii) and it is grown with genetically modified seeds, in fields that are so full of chemicals that it's a wonder anyone can survive eating this crap. I am madder than He-- about this, but I am doing the only thing I can do to make sure the FDA, the EPA, and the rest of you government people don't poison me.

It is time for all of you government people to start listening to "the people" of this country, but I have little hope of this happening in time for my generation (baby boomers) to survive the "holocost" we have created in our wonderful country. I want you to know I will not take this lying down. I will speak with everyone I know (over 2,000 people on my email list) and let them know how I feel about our government watching while large corporations drive us to an early death.

It will not take long before there could be rioting in the streets over this issue of food. So, if you do not want this, I suggest you begin listening to "the people" instead of "the money".

Merry Christmas
