I am writing because I am concerned about the lack of competition in agricultural markets.

Food is grown and raised in ways that are terrible for the environment, with methods that pollute the water, poison the soil, and threaten our long-term food security.

This is also going to effect human health and longevity. Conventionally grown food is devoid of vital micro-nutrients and minerals the the body NEEDS and as we become less and less nourished, our bodies are responding with higher and higher rates of dis-ease.

I am one of the canaries in the coal mine as I am highly sensitive to all chemicals and fragrances. I need to use what is deemed as "special" paints, cleaning products, body products, and organic foods.

This is actually the way nature intended...it isn't "special" it is normal. We developed the other products thinking it would improve our qualities of life, but the truth is we've overexpanded and now it is time to contract.

Thank you for giving me the opportunity to comment.

Sincerely,

Lindsey Feeney
